Catheter ablation for atrial flutter is an operation on the heart that aims to stop the atrial flutter. In the majority of cases the abnormal electrical connection that needs to be ablated is found in the right atrium. Who benefits from having catheter ablation for atrial flutter?

What is an 'ablation' Ablation (sounds like ah-blay-shun) is a medical procedure used to correct certain heart rhythm problems, such as atrial flutter. It restores the normal regular rhythm of the heart by scarring the tissue in the heart that triggers the abnormal rhythm. This allows the heart to return to normal regular rhythm.

Atrial flutter ablation is performed in the hospital. You'll receive a medication called a sedative that helps you relax. Once the sedative takes effect, a small area near a vein in your groin or neck is numbed and catheters are inserted into the vein. Your doctor carefully guides the catheters through the vein and into your heart.

Atrial pacing techniques to interrupt or suppress atrial flutter have evolved. Catheter ablation techniques either to cure atrial flutter or to control the ventricular response rate have been developed, and related surgical treatments are available. Even automatic low energy cardioversion of atrial flutter to sinus rhythm has been developed.

atrial flutter is designed to control the rate at which the ventricles contract, to restore the normal rhythm of the heart, and to treat the disorder causing the arrhythmia. Drugs to prevent the formation of blood clots and emboli (anticoagulants or aspirin) are usually given.
