High Elves convey meaning into the slightest gesture, perceiving a wealth of information in the slightest nod of a head, or narrowing of eyes. More than once the Lords of Ulthuan have made war amongst themselves or upon other races for some real or imagined slight, for though they are a noble people the High Elves can be cold and haughty ...

There are two specific dialects: Darnassian, the current language; and an older script, a strange dialect, that can be found in ancient night elf ruins (perhaps Elven). Just as the naga, high elves, and blood elves are descended from night elves, so Darnassian bears some resemblance to the Nazja and Thalassian languages.

↑The term "high elf" in 1st, 2nd, and 3rd editions of D&D was the main playable elven race, the common elf. High elves of this sort did not exist in the Realms, though they shared the same statistics with moon elves. In the Realms, the term "high elf" was a synonym for gold elves only, according to the Forgotten Realms Campaign Set, Elves of Evermeet, and Player's Guide to the Forgotten ...
