One remarkable aspect of James Turrell: A Retrospective, is that it runs for more than seven months, not finishing until June 28. One suspects this is not an unprecedented tribute to the artist, but a testimony to the state of the NGA. One gets the impression of an institution short on funds and ideas.

James Turrell: Seeing Yourself See by Christine Y. Kim ...

James Turrell creates art with light, space and perception. In November 1966 he rented a studio in the Mendota Hotel building in Santa Monica, Los Angeles, and began working with the interior spaces, discovering, in the process, a ' universe of possibilities ' and ' ideas for a lifetime ' s work '. [1] In sealing off the rooms and constructing walls and apertures to control the light ...
