Harvest Thanksgiving. John 7:37-40. Not so many years ago, a shopping trip to the greengrocers would reveal a small assortment of locally grown produce - various root and leaf vegetables, a selection of apples, pears, bananas, oranges and possibly some plums, the odd melon, pineapple or coconut. The vegetables tended to be those which you could grow in the garden, greenhouse or allotment - though perhaps delivered a few weeks earlier than you could expect from home-grown produce.

Sermon: Harvest Sunday, 1 October 2017, St John the Divine. While it may not have quite the widespread significance it used to have, I must admit I still have a soft spot for Harvest Festival. Partly, it's nostalgia: it takes me back to the church of my childhood, when we Sunday School children would process up the aisle to present baskets of fruit, vegetables and flowers which, later, would be distributed to people and organisations in the local community, or auctioned off to raise funds ...
