Shades of Singapore: Sister Sarah Balfour's Memoirs of Judicial Caning in South Africa, Vol. I. In pre-war South Africa, Sarah Balfour, a nursing Sister, administered to young women and girls awaiting punishment in the court system. This provocative memoir tells in great detail of Sister Sarah's job and "good fortune" of examining girls prior to their punishments -- often canings and strappings while tied naked to the whipping bench.

banks can ride on this wave of opportunity.

Today's "colonial" Singapore and Sister Sarah Balfour's prewar "colonial" South Africa seem a good match. In her most unusual and provocative memoir, the Nursing Sister tells in great detail of her experiences in judicial caning.

I really felt astonished by this little island, so close to Malaysia and Indonesia. As the neighboring countries seem to struggle against poverty, a relative under-development or corruption, Singapore is growing fast and succeeding. It is far more a dragon than it seems to be. There are high-rise buildings there and remote quarters with Indian, Chinese and Malay communities. There are also Westerns expats seeking money and glory. From the shopping malls to the exotic and tropical gardens, from one the most active ports in Asia to pristine bank headquarters, there is a common sense of being part of something that is growing and booming. It is a city throbbing with life, full of subjects, ideal for a photographer. This is the journey that I wanted to share with you through the photos in this album.

Set within the context of growing political pluralism and the increasing use of new communication technologies for social mobilisation, the Institute of Policy Studies organised a national conference on civil society in November 2013. This collection of the essays that were presented at or inspired by the conference provides nuanced analyses of the development of the sector in Singapore since the Institute's first such conference held in 1998. The first section of the book discusses the different philosophies and approaches that underpin how civic activists engage with the State; the second section examines some key forces of change that are re-shaping the sector; and, the third section sets out some emerging issues facing it. Combining insights from experts and civic activists themselves, this book proposes an agenda for the future development of the civil society in Singapore.

Analysts generally agree that, in the long term, the biggest challenge to American hegemony is not military, but rather China's economic rise. This perception is spread in no small measure because Xi Jinping has - in the face of patent military inferiority - conducted himself much more boldly on the world stage than Hu Jintao. Meanwhile, China has also begun conjuring up an alternative vision for global leadership, now widely termed as the 'China model'. This book therefore offers a critical and comprehensive explanation of the China model and its origins. Using a range of case studies, covering varying historical and geographical approaches, it debates whether the Chinese experience in the last three decades of economic reform should be interpreted as an answer to the reigning hegemony of neoliberalism, or rather a further reinforcement of it. To answer these questions, it provides an investigation into what China may have learned from its East Asian neighbours' earlier economic successes. It also examines how it is responding to and might even reconfigure the world political-economic system as it develops fresh and potentially more powerful regulatory capacities. Providing a multi-dimensional analysis of the 'China model', the book will be of interest to students and scholars of Chinese Economics, Economic Geography and Chinese Studies.

This volume explores the nature of charisma as it accounts for the success of leaders. Charisma is deconstructed and illustrated through the "case studies" of three influential leaders in Singapore. Cultural issues are discussed and leadership qualities in general are explored.

Singapore marvel at the greenness of it all. Wide boulevards shaded by venerable Rain Trees, interconnecting parks displaying a huge variety of tropical plants, roadside plantings in every shade of green, red and yellow, and great expanses of junglescape alongside the office skyscrapers and apartment blocks. It is truly a garden city, in all senses of the word. In this travel pictorial, the authors showcase many of the Lion City's green spaces, be they the Botanical Gardens and national parks, or plantings of bougainvillea tumbling down the crash-barriers on the super-highways. Orchard Road, the world-renowned Zoological Gardens, the ground-breaking Mandai Orchid Gardens, and many more, are portrayed, along with other lesser-known parks and private and hotel gardens. Sumptuous full-colour photographs by Luca Invernizzi Tettoni and texts by botanical expert William Warren literally take one down the garden path on a discovery tour of Singapore's cityscapes, landscapes, hardscapes and few remaining "wild-scapes."

' This book details the findings of a large-scale survey on the values and lifestyles of 1500 Singapore residents in 2001. Semi-structured interviews with elderly and young adult Singaporeans were also conducted. This comprehensive study provides insights into Singaporeans' value orientations, personal values, aspirations,

Keywords: Values; Lifestyles; Aspirations; Consumption Behaviors; Singaporeans; Elderly; Young Adults Reviews: "To provide an added measure of richness and depth of understanding the values and lifestyles of the participants, semi-structured interviews were used as a complementary research tool. Two demographic segments representing both ends of the age spectrum, that is, the elderly and the young adults were selected for these interviews. The choice of these two age groups has added interesting relevance to the findings. As the Singapore population is ageing, it is timely to know the issues and concerns of the elderly. On the other extreme, the young adults face a new set of challenges living in a globalized and competitive world."
