Subject, Theme and Agent in Modern Standard Arabic ...

In certain theories of linguistics, thematic relations, also known as semantic roles, are the various roles that a noun phrase may play with respect to the action or state described by a governing verb, commonly the sentence's main verb. For example, in the sentence "Susan ate an apple", Susan is the doer of the eating, so she is an agent; the apple is the item that is eaten, so it is a patient. While most modern linguistic theories make reference to such relations in one form or another, the ge agent; cause; instrument; experiencer;

recipient; location; path; goal; measure; theme. Agents are arguments that bring about a state of affairs. The line between agents, on the one hand, and causes or instruments, on the other, can be fuzzy, but agents are (or are perceived to be) conscious or sentient, in a way that causes or instruments aren't. Some examples are given in (1)-(3).

Thematic roles - Linguistics

The subject is the union of two semantic entities: the agent and the intransitive argument. For example, in the intransitive sentence "He ran," He is the intransitive argument and thus uses the subject pronoun form. He also appears in the sentence "He chased him." In this case, it is the agent.

What is the difference between a subject and an agent in ...

In linguistics, a grammatical agent is the thematic relation of the cause or initiator to an event. The agent is a semantic concept distinct from the subject of a sentence as well as from the topic.Whereas the subject is determined syntactically, primarily through word order, the agent is determined through its relationship to the action expressed by the verb.
