What is the 'Sublime'? - Peter Sjöstedt-H The Harvard Classics. 1909-14. Terror. No passion so effectually robs the mind of all its powers of acting and reasoning as fear. 1 For fear being an apprehension of pain or death, it operates in a manner that resembles actual pain. Whatever therefore is terrible, with regard to sight, is sublime too, whether this cause of terror

From Terror: fear “robsthe mind of all its powers of acting and reasoning”; includes fear of pain or death; whatever produces terror visually is sublime too. From Obscurity: when we know and can see the danger clearly, much of our fear “vanishes”; “dark, confused, uncertain images” found in nature produce obscurity.

Anything that is great, infinite or obscure could be an object of terror and the sublime, for there was an element of the unknown about them. Burke finds more than a few instances of terror and the sublime in John Milton's Paradise Lost, in which the figures of Death and Satan are considered sublime. Kant
