Dirty Secrets Club is the first book in a new series from Gardiner about Jo Beckett. I found this book to be shadow less intense than her series about Evan Delany, because there is slightly less urgency in forensic psychiatry, though in this case Beckett is racing against time to prevent further murder-suicides from occurring.

The Dirty Secrets Club - Meg Gardiner

Jo and police officer Amy Tang have 48 hours, they estimate, before the next person dies. Jo begins to find clues about the existence of the dirty secrets club, and this roller-coaster ride of a book covers her frantic attempts to work out who is a likely next victim, and why Callie has apparently acted completely against type by killing herself and (almost) her young passenger, now under protection in a hospital.
