FOUNDERS AND THE CLASSICS — Neoclassicism and America 1750

The founders were men shaped by the Classics. They believed that a rigorous education in the Classics prepared one for liberty and inoculated one from the pleasant flatteries that precede tyranny. Richard's fascinating book not only sheds light on a pedagogical world view that has passed away, but by necessity prompts us to wonder at the costs of its passing.

The Classical Education of the Founders — The Imaginative

The Founders were taught that free societies were sustained by a virtuous populace, and that, if a society were to abandon a study of the classics, that same society would eventually abandon the virtues championed by the classical authors. There was a more pragmatic side to the Founders' classical education as well.

The Founding Fathers and the Classics

The American Founders and the Classics analyzes theories of democracy from America's founders and connects them with the ideas of classical and Renaissance political philosophy. The text explores classical thinkers from Ancient Greece, political writing from the Enlightenment, and America's founders.

The Founders and the Classics — Carl J. Richard | Hifind

Baehr offers arguments against interpreting, defending, and attacking sociology's great texts and authors in terms of founders and canons. He demonstrates why, in logical and historical terms, discourses and traditions cannot actually be "founded" and why the term "founder" has little explanatory content.
