For a quiz site centered around knowledge and facts, (at least I do) think that using "enemies" to describe the Central Powers is not really the right thing to do. Knowledge, and specifically history is about recording things as they happened, not instilling your personal (and modern day) opinion on what happened 100 years ago.

History has been taught in a boring way for far too long. A subject as moving and powerful as humanity's past should be inviting, and when it is told well, it is. Susan Wise Bauer succeeds in telling the captivating story of history with her best-selling history series. Parents and young readers have fallen in love with her narrative history, The Story of the World, and its accompanying Activity Book. Now teachers and home educators can take advantage of a new and valuable learning tool. These easy-to-use tests and answer keys, successfully used by hundreds of parents and teachers, provide an objective method for measuring retention of key facts, figures, and events from history. A combination of sequencing, matching, short-answer, and essay-style questions gives students a chance to show what they've learned. Used with the Activity

Book and The Story of the World, the tests give educators a complete history curriculum for their elementary school students.
